

The Jericho Arts Centre (JAC) Communicable Disease Plan

The intention of the JAC Communicable Disease Plan (CDP) is to promote the health and safety of the entire JAC community, including production team members, staff, volunteers, audience members, and visitors, by providing information that can be used to prevent the contraction and spread of communicable diseases, in addition to the response plan in the event of someone taking ill from COVID-19 at JAC.

A communicable disease may be defined as any illness caused by an infectious agent or a toxic product that can be transmitted from one person to another.

Scope

Communicable diseases falling within the scope of this Plan are those typically caused by viruses, bacteria, fungi, or parasites and normally spread through direct or indirect human contact. Some examples of communicable diseases include:

Coronavirus
Influenza
Hepatitis A
Norovirus
Meningococcal Meningitis
Mumps
Measles
Rubella
Tuberculosis

Prevention

Preventing the spread of communicable diseases involves everyone taking measures to reduce the risk of transmission. Vaccines, antibiotics, antivirals, innate immunity, and/or acquired immunity can provide some protection against certain communicable diseases but not all communicable diseases are treatable, and current treatments are not guaranteed to protect against all communicable disease. As a result, it is important to limit the spread of a communicable disease before it has the potential to cause serious complications. Below are some common strategies to limit the spread:

- Staying at home when you are feeling ill.
- Frequent hand washing or using hand sanitizer.
- Sneezing or coughing into your arm or elbow.
- Routinely cleaning and disinfecting surfaces.
- Practicing a healthy lifestyle by getting some exercise, eating well, and getting a sufficient amount of sleep every night.
- Keeping up to date with immunizations and vaccinations

Identify

The level of risk of certain communicable diseases, including COVID-19, may increase from time to time or on a seasonal basis. This may occur at a local or regional level, or within the workplace. Recognizing the signs and symptoms of a communicable disease and understanding the modes of transmission is the first step in reducing the incidence of disease associated with communicable diseases. Signs and symptoms will vary depending on the disease, but common characteristics associated at the onset of most communicable diseases typically include fever and other flu-like symptoms: achiness, upset stomach, fatigue, fever, and headaches.

The Friends of the Jericho Arts Centre Society (FOJAC) and United Players of Vancouver (UP) are jointly responsible for ensuring the safety of artists and audience entering the Jericho Arts Centre. This plan is designed with a division of responsibilities in mind, with FOJAC responsible for the overall safety of the building, and UP responsible for the day-to-day safety of operation in the lead up and during the run of one of their shows.

When a guest company is in, responsibilities assigned to UP will be undertaken by that company.

The Jericho Arts Centre plan takes precedence over incoming group's plans, though an incoming group's plan may be stricter for safety if they desire.

Safety is paramount: the goal is to establish safe, straightforward practices that meet and exceed provincial guidelines at all times, while still opening the building to use.

Responsibility of FOJAC

It is the responsibility of FOJAC to book guest companies and other renters. Incoming guest companies and renters will be informed by FOJAC of the Communicable Disease Plan, and renters must demonstrate that they are able to comply with it and with public health safety directives.
